SHANK LOSES LAST APPEAL

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

SCIENCE dissects a criminal's brain, jots down copious notes, writes a libraryful of books, and croaks diabolically about "heredity." The trouble with science, however, is, that usually before it gets through with the criminal it has so frightened the rest of us that we turn elsewhere not only for consolation but for truth. I think the country minister who preached the funeral oration over Charles Arthur Floyd at Sallisaw, Okla., Sunday, told the truth.

Chain Grocers Hit by Strike; Another in Glass Industry

A. & P. Co. Closes 300 Stores in Cleveland (Ohio) Monday

ASK UNIONIZATION

Flat Glass Workers Threaten Strike—Silk Dyers in Conference

By the Associated Press

Three hundred grocery stores—all that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. operates in Cleveland, Ohio—were under orders to remain closed Monday.

They will be abandoned because of labor troubles, the company says.

The chain's unionized butchers were called out in Milwaukee, Wis., where the meat departments have been closed in 26 of 38 stores. The company says they were unprofitable; the union blames labor trouble.

Delegates at the convention of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America, in Pittsburgh, Pa., talked of a nation-wide strike, while representatives of 20,000 striking silk and rayon dyers in the East planned to renew conferences with the employers Monday.

Grocer Strike Looms

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—(P)—As George L. Hartford, chairman of the board of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., said he saw "no solution" to the labor problem which caused the company to close 428 stores here, seven local unions Sunday night called upon the company to accede to unionization.

The unions' statement said the closing of the stores and the discharging of 2,200 employees Saturday was "further proof of our contention that the A. & P. company is anxious to defy the government and the unions."

A state official of the Meat Cutters Union, Michael Schulz, said at Cincinnati that a state-wide strike of butchers employed by the A. & P. might be sought within a week at the union's convention in Columbus.

In Milwaukee, William Mansfield, organizer for the meat cutters, said the butchers in the A. & P. stores there would go on strike Monday.

The National Labor Relations Board in Washington, a spokesman said, was watching the Cleveland dispute but thus far had found no ground for intervention.

The strike of union butchers spread to another chain company at Milwaukee Sunday night with the calling of a similar strike at the Kroger Grocery and Baking company stores. Both strikes were ordered to begin Monday.

Investors Urged to Buy Real Property

Real Estate Is Superior to Bonds If Inflation Comes

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—(P)—Taking up one of the most controversial problems, the Investment Bankers association grappled Sunday with the subject of the dollar in a closed forum with Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, "hard money" economist and critic of the administration's monetary program.

In adhering to its policy of playing down political controversy, the association made public only certain excerpts from Dr. Kemmerer's address.

These excerpts included a recommendation by the economist that cautious investors protect their wealth from depreciation of the dollar through purchase of "durable commodities, real estate and corporate equities" rather than high grade bonds.

This, of course, was scarcely encouraging to investment bankers who are striving to revive the business of financing through the issue of bonds.

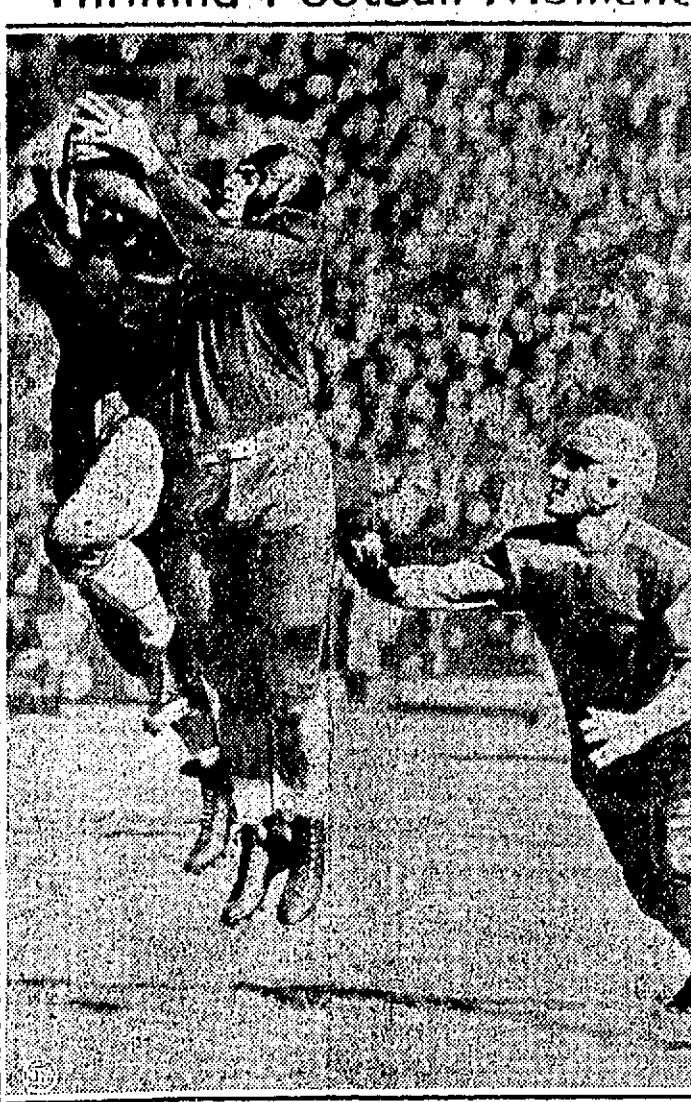

Some bankers said much of Dr. Kemmerer's more striking comment was omitted from the portions made public.

Predicting a distinct inflationary trend in financial and economic developments in the United States, in keeping with his previously publicly expressed opinion, Dr. Kemmerer said:

"Both prices and interest rates will tend strongly upward. From this it follows that the cautious investor, instead of lending money now through the purchase of bonds, should use his money for the purchase of durable commodities, real estate, and corporate equities. Carefully chosen common stocks now, as an investment category, are preferable to bonds; and well distributed second and third bonds are preferable to first grade bonds."

Thrilling Football Moment

It was a thrilling split second of action that the camera caught on the Pittsburgh gridiron as Siedel, a Minnesota player, (extreme left), leaped to intercept a forward pass intended for his Pitt opponent. In the instant the latter's hands would have closed safely on the ball, Siedel snatched it away. Minnesota, in winning the exciting game 13-7, established itself as a favorite for championship honors.

40% of Seed Loans Have Been Repaid

$18,000 of $46,000 Loaned Here by U. S. Last Spring Retired

Approximately 40 per cent of the federal seed loans made in Hempstead county last spring have already been repaid, and collections are coming in fast, J. H. Kent, field supervisor for the Hope office, announced Monday.

Of the $45,526 loaned last spring a total of $18,397.81 had been repaid when Mr. Kent closed his books last Saturday night.

The Hempstead County Teachers' Institute met at Paisley grade school Saturday.

Singing was directed by Mrs. John Wellborn, followed by a brief devotional by E. E. Austin, county examiner.

The question of systematic, correct reports, was presented by Miss Mamie Bell Holt, with special emphasis on promptness, a separate report for each grade, opening and closing pages of register filled very carefully, according to directions.

All registers must be approved by the county examiner before the close of the school term.

Mr. Dodson, county examiner of Howard county, led the discussion on importance of thoroughness in teaching. "The problem of adjustment of the child to fit into life's work requires thorough, intensive teaching. The subject must be made attractive to the student, through definite assignments and thorough preparation of the teacher," he said.

Mr. Austin stressed the importance of thoroughness in the teaching of English.

Mr. Honea, principal of Fulton school, discussed needs of present day education. Hope and a vision are necessary to trustworthiness, dependability, and to honorable and worthy achievement, he said. Character education is vital. Adults are responsible for morality of the youth, the teacher must constantly emphasize the importance of homes.

"The present curriculum is built on obsolete psychology. We are living in a dynamic social order. Education is life. The ideal curriculum is a composite unit of study," he declared.

Mrs. Henry Haynes, principal of Brookwood school, stressed the necessity of broader training and wider use of subject matter, not a narrow curriculum but a new attempt to make a curriculum to fit the needs of society. This is a year of exploration where units are fixed to fit present needs, she said.

The place of athletics in the school was discussed by Foy Hammons, coach of Hope High School. "Athletics get practical training for everyday living on the football field. A good athlete must be a quick thinker in order to meet situations that always arise. Under the proper guidance, the fighting spirit of the athlete to reach the goal, even though he may be defeated, is helpful in training for athletics as well as in after life," Mr. Hammons said.

Loyalty to the state program was urged by Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent of city schools. "The financial program and the new curriculum with its adjustment to the State Department, demand the loyalty of Arkansas teachers. Teachers must lead the way by fitting this program to the community," she said.

WASHINGTON—There is a sly smile around the White House, considering the effectiveness of the president's thrust last week against advocates of veteran bonus payment. In his Virginia speech Mr. Roosevelt, without mentioning the bonus, pointed out that the veterans as a class were much better off than the rest of the nation.

The irony lies in the fact that Mr. Roosevelt's words were suggested by the plea of the publishers of the American Legion Monthly, who are soliciting national advertisers with this description of their readers:

"816,000 men of an average age of 39, no short pants; no long beards; few under 35, few over 45; men in the prime of life at the top of their stride—with an average income well above the national average."

Environment, Not Heredity, Blighted 'Pretty Boy' Floyd

Sallisaw (Okla.) Minister Thus Summarizes Desperado at Funeral

TO MOTHER EARTH

10,000 From 20 States Crowd Native Town to Attend Last Rites

SALLISAW, Okla.—(P)—The bullet-ridden body of Charles A. (Pretty Boy) Floyd, Oklahoma's phantom outlaw, was buried in a little hillside cemetery near the village of Atkins Sunday while a crowd of curious estimated at 20,000 looked on.

Once rated by federal officers as public enemy No. 1, Floyd's career of crime ended in Ohio last Monday when federal and state officers shot him as he ran. He was accused of several murders, bank robberies and kidnappings.

His last resting place was a grave he reputedly had picked for himself more than a year ago with a remark to Mrs. Walter Floyd, his widowed mother:

"Right here is where you can put me. I expect to go down with lead in me—perhaps the sooner the better."

The mother, Mrs. Ruby Floyd, the outlaw's widow, his 12-year-old son, Jack Dempsey Floyd, four sisters and two brothers sat in a small arbor, sheltered from the eyes of the world, as the casket was lowered into the grave.

The Rev. W. E. Rockett of the Sallisaw Baptist church preached the final services, assisted by the Rev. Owen White of the Atkins Baptist church.

The funeral sermon

The Rev. Mr. Rockett took his text from John, 19th chapter and the 90th verse: "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, it is finished; and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost."

"If heredity alone could direct the lives of our restless youth," the Rev. Mr. Rockett said, "we in all probability should not be here on this sad occasion, but a stronger force, environment, steps in to defeat heredity. Thus oftentimes the example of consecrated mothers, fathers and grandparents are nullified by the evil forces of environment."

"There is nothing that we could say that would be of any benefit to Charles Arthur Floyd, but it is possible, we hope, for us to say something that would be beneficial and consoling to those who are living; therefore we urge you who do not know him, the Christ, as your Lord and Savior, that you seek him now before it is too late for we know neither the day nor the hour when he may come and we may have to recognize the fact that it is finished."

The thousands of onlookers stood about the cemetery and the crowd overflowed onto the nearby pastures. Fences were torn down on the pastures to make room for parked cars.

From 20 States

A steady stream of motor cars from 20 states came to the cemetery from Sallisaw. Some spectators came in wagons and buggies and others on horseback. A few came afoot. Farm women dressed in calico aprons appeared with babies in their arms. School buses brought children.

Three women faltered near the little arbor and were nearly trampled.

At Sallisaw the sheriff's office said it was the largest crowd this city has ever seen. A private funeral service was held at the Sallisaw home of Mrs. Floyd before the body was taken to Atkins, Floyd's boyhood home. Only relatives were admitted to the Floyd residence.

35-Year-Old Dress in Stage Program

'Souvenirs of Yesteryears' Paisley Show at Saenger Tuesday

Memories will walk on the eve of Halloween, Tuesday on the Saenger stage.

Arrayed in gorgeous silks and satins of the past about 50 models will bring to life wedding gowns and many other garments rich in sentiments and history. As far as possible the gowns will be modeled by relatives of the original owners.

Outstanding among this interesting collection of textile history is one dress 35 years old, and a wedding dress which has seen 70 years go by. The styles of anti-bellum and Civil War days are featured in a large number of gowns, while the styles of later days are chronologically brought down to the grand climax by the bride of 1934.

Another attraction is the old fashioned quartette accompanied by Mrs. C. C. McNeil at the parlor organ.

The feature picture "I Like It That Way," is said to be a picture which the entire family will enjoy.

J. L. Higgason Dies, Pioneer Citizen

Heart Attack Fatal to Father of Former Hempstead County Judge

J. L. Higgason, 72, father of L. F. Higgason, former Hempstead county judge, died suddenly Saturday at his home three miles east of Hope. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Funeral services were held from the Baptist church at Rocky Mount Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. Wallace R. Rogers of Hope, officiating. The body was buried at Rocky Mount.

A native of Columbia county, Mr. Higgason moved to this county more than 30 years ago.

He married Miss Ella Butler of Nevada county 25 years ago. Thirteen children were born. Among the survivors besides the widow are two daughters and five sons. They are: Mrs. Norman Taylor and Mrs. Elston Messer of Rocky Mount; L. F. Higgason of Hope; Leonard Higgason of Murfreesboro; H. H. Higgason of Hope; G. B. Higgason of Irving, Texas; Merritt Higgason of Longview, Texas. Two half sisters of Dallas, Texas, also survive.

The Colley family died from the effects of poison following a picnic near Benton last year.

The redemption feature of the 1934 highway bond refunding law was upheld Monday by the supreme court, which gave its approval to the recent acceptance of 2 million dollars in highway and toll bridge bond tenders, for which the state paid about 1 million 500 thousand dollars.

An election contest appeal from St. Francis circuit court, the supreme court held that the failure of a voter to assess for real or personal property was not a bar to his privilege of voting, provided he assessed and paid his poll tax according to law.

The supreme court also held that school districts could not vote a continuous millage tax for interest and principal on refunding bonds, and officials of the State Department of Education said a 29-million-dollar school bond refunding program was virtually stopped as a result.

Included in the cases decided Monday was that of Merchants & Planters bank versus John B. Hickey. Ousatcha circuit, affirmed.

North State M. E. Conference Nov. 1

250 Delegates to Attend Five-Day Meeting at Fayetteville

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(P)—More than 250 ministerial and lay delegates, representing a constituency of 75,000 persons, will gather here on Thursday for the annual North Arkansas conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, opening on November 1, the session will continue for five days, closing with the reading of the ministerial appointments for the ensuing church year.

The session, the 99th, will bring to the general superintendency of the conference Bishop John N. Moore of Dallas, who will hold conferences Wednesday with presiding elders and conference boards. Rev. Warren Johnston and Rev. Fred R. Hamilton, pastor and presiding elder here, will act as hosts to the gathering.

North Arkansas presiding elders who will assist Bishop Moore during the conference are C. W. Lester, Batesville district; F. M. Tollehorn, Booneville district; William Sherman, Conway district; Fred R. Hamilton, Fayetteville district; H. H. Griffin, Fort Smith district; G. G. Davidson, Helena district; S. D. Wiggins, Jonesboro district; James A. Anderson, Paragould district; and F. E. Dodson, Searcy district.

As this will be the first conference for North Arkansas since the general conference of the church in Jackson, Miss., last spring, the session will take important action on many administrative matters. The church's new financial plan, presenting a unified budget and precluding campaigns and special movements by introducing the principle of voluntary giving, will be outlined.

The conference will also have before it a constitutional question demanding a three-fourths vote in order to ratify general conference legislation under which presiding elders who have served a district in that capacity for four years must be appointed to serve in some other relationship before being given another presiding eldership.

The delegates, 175 ministerial and 80 from the laity, will also take up election of personnel of the conference boards for the ensuing quadrennium. It is generally admitted that an effort will be made to place more women members on the conference boards than heretofore. The Methodist Women's Missionary Council has sponsored a church-wide movement to secure for women a larger place in the service of the church, with full clerical rights as the ultimate goal.

As always, much interest centers in the annual appointments. Methodist law makes it incumbent that presiding elders be changed every four years, and while there is no actual time limit on pastorate, the former four year rule generally prevails.

Pastors who have served four years or longer in their present connection in the North Arkansas conference are: J. W. Johnston, Evening Shade; A. E. Holway, First church, Newport; V. F. Harris, Dardanelle circuit; J. W. Hargen, Perry and Houston; J. W. Workman, Conway; R. S. Gayden, Bentonville; A. H. Dulaney, Gentry; W. A. Downum, Green Forest; E. J. Stevenson, Prairie Grove; C. W. REFUNDING UPHELD

Road Law Sustained, But School Move Is Dealt Alleged Blow

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The Arkansas Supreme Court Monday refused to compel Prison Superintendent, Todd, to grant a sanity hearing for Mark H. Shank, Akron (Ohio) attorney, under sentence of death for the poison slaying of Alvin Colley, thus exhausting the condemned man's legal chances of escaping the electric chair.

Shank was indicted for the poison murder of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Colley and their two children, but was tried only on the charge of murdering Colley.

The Colley family died from the effects of poison following a picnic near Benton last year.

The Claw of the Forgotten Murder

BY CARLETON KENDRAKE
©1934 NEA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When CHARLES HENDER, reporter for The Blade, a town newspaper, died, his publisher, DAN HILBERT, publisher, employed SIDNEY GRIFF, former criminalist, to solve the murder. Morden had been investigating the murder of FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent following the arrest of an important criminal to be CATHAY and accompanied by a girl called MARY DRIGGS.

The day following Morden's death, CATHAY died of poisoning. His wife, Mrs. HENDER, had signed the agreement of ALICE LUTHER who has reported to police the alleged murder of her husband. ESTHER DOWDY.

GRIFF goes to see Alice and accuses her of being "Father O'Connell's" mistress. She denies this but changes her former story. When GRIFF leaves he instructs detectives to shadow the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

SIDNEY GRIFF returned to his own car and drove at once to the Hillcrest hotel. He got in touch with the bell captain on the night shift and gave him a $5 bill by way of introduction.

"I want to find out," he said, "about a man by the name of CATHAY who was registered here on Monday night in Room 904."

"There's been two or three people asking about him," the bell boy said.

"Showed you photographs?"

"Yes."

"The photographs they showed you weren't the photographs of the man you was here?"

"No."

"Can you remember what he looked like?"

"He was rather a big fellow and I think he had blue eyes. I can't remember enough about him to describe him, but I could tell him if I saw him again."

"He was paged several times during the evening?"

"Yes."

"Can you tell me about the calls he received? You paged him during the evening here in the lobby."

"It must have been 15 or 20 times."

"Were the calls telephone calls, or was it someone who was here in the hotel and wanted to talk with him?"

"Someone here in the hotel—a little guy with gray hair and blue eyes. I remember him well. He was mad as a wet cat about something. He had an appointment with this guy, CATHAY, that CATHAY hadn't kept. He was some kind of an inventor, I think, and there was some kind of a deal on that CATHAY was to close."

GRIFF's eyes were thoughtful.

"I wonder if we can find out who that man was?" he said.

"I think so," the bell captain told him. "I think the man had a room here in the hotel, at least for the night, and I think he waited over. It seems to me I saw him checking out about the time I came on duty Tuesday night."

"Let's go see if we can find out."

"Okay," the bell boy said. "You wait here, chief, and I'll go prowling around a little bit. I think maybe I can find out. I tell you what I think I can do. I think I can contact one of the boys who took a pint of whisky up to his room. I remember, the boy asked me for an okay on him."

THE bell boy grinned confidently. "Of course," he said, "that's just between you and me, chief."

GRIFF nodded.

The bell captain departed and was back within less than five minutes.

"I've got him located for you," he said. "His name is Harry Fancher and he lives at 3692 Kenwood avenue, Millvale. At any rate, that's the address he gave on the register."

SIDNEY GRIFF looked at his watch. "A night drive," he said, "would bring me into Millvale just about daylight."

The bell boy regarded him curiously.

"It would," he said, "be a long way to go if the man had given a phoney address. Lots of them do, you know."

SIDNEY GRIFF nodded thoughtfully. He handed the boy another $5 bill. He went to the telephone booth and put through a call for the police headquarters at Millvale. Within 10 minutes he had them on the line.

"You have a city directory there, as well as a register of voters?" he asked. "This is Sidney Griff, the criminalist."

"What is it you want?" asked a gruff voice at the other end of the line.

"I want to find out whether you have a Harry Fancher registered in town, what his occupation is, and where he lives."

"Hold the line," said the voice, with a weary lack of curiosity, engendered by a life that made crime a mere matter of daily routine.

After a moment the voice came over the wire.

"Yes, there's a Harry Fancher registered. He lives at 3692 Kenwood avenue, and he's an inventor and machinist."

"Thank you," said Griff, and hung up.

HARRY FANCHER, attired in towneast pajamas, with his hair in wild disarray, regarded Sidney Griff with meek brown eyes.

"Sorry,"

GRIFF raised his eyebrows. Fancher went on to explain.

"I shouldn't have slept so late," he said. "Usually I'm up earlier but, this being Sunday morning, I stayed in bed."

GRIFF regarded the man with curious, speculative eyes.

"I am the one who should make the apologies," he said, "for disturbing you at this hour. But I drove all night in order to get here—that is, the best part of the night."

"To see me?" asked Fancher, raising his brows.

"Exactly," Sidney Griff agreed. "Would you come in?"

Fancher led the way into the house, his slippers sliding along the floor. He waved a hand and indicated a chair in the sitting room.

"I'm sorry," he said, "the room looks like this. It's just the way I left it when I went to bed last night. I do quite a bit of reading and research work, and I'm not always tidy about putting my books back."

GRIFF surveyed the littered table and picked up one of the trade magazines at random.

"You're an inventor, I believe?" he said.

"Well," Fancher said, "I don't know as you could call me that. I'm a thinker. I like to tinker with things."

"Did you know Frank B. CATHAY of Riverview?" asked Griff.

There was a flicker of fire in the meek brown eyes.

"He had me come on a wild goose chase all the way to the city," Fancher remarked. "If he didn't want to finance my invention, why didn't he say so in the first place? Why did he go to the trouble of writing me a letter and telling me how wonderful he thought my invention was, and then fail to keep the appointment he made with me?"

"He wrote you?" asked Griff.

"Yes."

"Have you his letter available?" Griff inquired.

"Why, yes, I think so."

"I wonder if I could see it?" Fancher's slippers slid made shuffling sounds as he crossed to a writing desk. He opened the desk and turned to the criminologist.

"Here it is," he said.

GRIFF examined the letter carefully. It was written on the stationery of Frank B. CATHAY, stationery which read simply, "FRANK B. CATHAY—INVESTMENTS—908 First National Bank Building, Riverview."

There followed a date line, with the name of the city and state. The letter, which was addressed to Harry Fancher, at Millvale, read,

Dear Mr. Fancher: I have been very much interested in your correspondence relating to your new static eliminator for radios, while,

Writers and Hatedressers to Collaborate on Styles

Beauty columnists and a group of coiffure experts have at last banded together to sponsor a movement to create hair styles that will be flattering with hats. Already some steps have been taken and by January, when hat manufacturers launch their spring lines, there will be available to everyone, definite information and pictures about coiffures to go with the new models.

The coiffure people know there will be fewer disappointed customers. After all, nothing is worse than to get wearing your hair in a new and extremely flattering manner only to discover that it looks perfectly horrible under a particular hat that you very much want to own.

Then, too, there'll be greater versatility in hair styles. A girl won't want to wear the same kind of coiffure month in and month out. She'll know how to fix her hair several different ways—one to suit each hat in her wardrobe.

The hair is cut pompadour-fashion, without apron. Then it is waved backward from the forehead with the center of the first wave falling directly over the top of the ear. The ends are curled into tiny ringlets that are brushed out later to form a cascade effect. Combining dash and dignity, it is indeed the perfect coiffure on which to pose a smart Russian turn-of-white fur.

ordinarily, I do not finance inventions. I would be very glad to have a discussion with you for the purpose of ascertaining upon what mutually profitable basis we can arrange for the manufacture and sale of your device.

Will you please meet me at Hillcrest Hotel on Monday, the 10th of March, at the hour of 10 o'clock p. m. I will be glad to go into matters in detail at that time, as I expect to be in the city in connection with other business. I would suggest that you bring with you your patents and any data you may have on the cost of manufacture.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Frank B. CATHAY.

X-Rays Tell Severity of Joint Injuries

When one of your joints is subjected to severe and sudden strain, the ligaments and muscles associated with the joint give way. Usually the muscle tissue will tear first and the ligament afterward, since the ligaments are stronger.

The amount of tearing of the ligament may vary from the splitting of a few of its fibers to a complete pulling away of the ligament from the bone, part of the bone also coming with it.

Usually the most important step to take under such circumstances is to make certain that there has not been a fracture or breaking of the bone. The X-ray picture, particularly several pictures taken from different angles, will reveal whether the bone has been broken.

Sometimes, for comparison, you should have an X-ray picture of the corresponding joint on the opposite side of the body. After it has been determined that the bone has not been broken, it is usually customary to apply a bandage to make certain that the joint will be protected and properly supported.

Sometimes healing can be hastened by bathing the affected joint in hot water by applying heat in some similar manner. Sometimes also it is helpful to have light massage, at first gradual, increasing the manipulation as the joint improves.

In bandaging sprained ankles, it is important that the bandage come around the heel a sufficient number of times to give full support.

Somet persons suffer from what might be called a chronic spraining of a joint. With them the accident occurs so frequently and the repair takes place so slowly that the joint is constantly in a condition of swelling, inflammation and irritation.

Under such circumstances, adhesions may form in the joint and it becomes necessary for a specialist in orthopedic surgery to manipulate the joint, breaking up these adhesions and securing healing with proper looseness of movement.

When adhesions form, they cause limitation of movement. They also give a feeling of unsteadiness and some pain, because the pull is in the wrong direction.

In most cases a competent surgeon will use to it that the patient is under an anesthetic during such manipulations as a relief for the pain associated with them.

Remember that the term "sprain" is not an accurate diagnosis. This depends on a study of the joint involved, with a determination of just what structures have been injured.

New types of bandages have been developed which are elastic and adhesive and which aid to hold the tissues in place, at the same time permitting the person concerned to use the joint involved.

A Great Adventure Story in New Dress—This Novel Recounts Tale of Mexican Conquest

There never was an adventure story quite like that of Cortez who overthrew the Aztec empire in Mexico. It had, as they say, everything—battles against long odds, fantastic cities and bizarre peoples, the looting of incredible riches, bloodshed, intrigue, cruelty, heroism, and all the bright colors of one of the most astounding civilizations ever seen.

That is why "The Great White Gods," by Edward Stucken, is an interesting book. It is a novel draped over the narratives of the old chronicles, and while it is cumbersome, stilted, and vaguely old-fashioned, it does convey the unutterably romantic flavor of an almost unbelievable bit of history.

Consider what the author had to work with in this story.

He had a mysterious empire of gold and flowers, where a king wore robes made of burning birds' feathers and was shod in golden sandals. Its capital city was a weird Venice set among canals, with floating gardens in its lagoons, flower beds on the roof of every house, and great white temples to dominate the scene.

He had a contradictory people so soft hearted that they wept when pet birds died—and so cruel that they sacrificed thousands of human beings annually, and ate their bodies! And he had, lastly, a tiny band of hard-case adventurers who took advantage of a thoroughly improbable combination of circumstances to overthrow, pillage, and destroy this civilization.

An author can't go wrong with a set-up like that. "The Great White Gods," for all its faults, is exciting reading.

It is published by Farrar and Rinehart and the price is $3.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Use Suggestion Very Cautiously.

One day a man had a slight nose operation. When he started home the doctor said, "Just stay in bed a day, if you like. It doesn't matter, but try not to catch cold or get chilled. That's all."

So he went home and had a nervous chill that sent the family scurrying for hot water bottles and extra covers. His wife put a thermometer in his mouth. Normal temperature. He talked of pneumonia, but she went downstairs and turned on the radio.

Next day he was back at the office. His chill was produced by the power of suggestion.

A doctor once told me he had been called to the hospital at midnight by the husband of a girl who had just had her first baby. He had seen her at nine and she was blooming well. But she had insisted on talking about her best friend, who had just died of pneumonia.

Tricks Are Needed

Said the doctor, "When I went in the girl was breathing in agony. Her temperature was normal. Her heart was racing but strong. I was never so puzzled in my life."

"We did what we could, but I decided I'd have to turn trickster for the moment. I turned to the stunned boy and said, 'What did you think of the score today?'"

"He only gulped and murmured. I talked of everything from politics to cream cheese. They thought me an old jackass braying while they were dying."

"Gradually I saw the breath becoming normal. When I left there was no pneumonia and no hysterics. The clearest case of mental suggestion I ever experienced in all my years of practice. She was tired and excited and weak. Her mind did the rest."

Applies to Children, Too

There isn't a doctor in the country today who discounts to any great extent this power of the mind to suggest pain to the body. Real symptoms can be made worse by the sympathetic attitude of the mind and, at times, even synthetic symptoms can be manufactured and cause acute suffering.

Sympathy is sweet when a child is sick at heart. We should be careful not to say, "Are you sure the other ear doesn't ache, too?" or "Are you quite sure you haven't a pain in your stomach?" "You look tired, Sally. I believe you have a headache."

Not all children will react to such utterances, but the temperamental, high strung, imaginative and sensitive ones will very likely call our bluff. At any rate, it doesn't make anybody any happier and doesn't do any good.

The power of suggestion is employed most successfully with children to gain fine points in training. But it can be and often is the reverse. It's like the old saying, "Speak of the devil and there he is."

Boy Scouts

An estimate that 3 troops of the Tex-Ark. Council will earn the coveted 1934 Ten Year Program Award of the Boy Scouts of America was made Monday by Rev. Geo. F. X. Strassner, district chairman. A medallion will be made available to these troops.

The ten year program, as established by the Boy Scouts of America at the beginning of 1933, is described as a challenge to every Boy Scout Troop in the nation to maintain a high-quality, year-round program, so that the interests of its members will be retained for at least a four-year period. With the ultimate goal of the program realized at the end of 1932, one out of every four boys in America of Scout age will have been a Scout and will have come under the influence of all of the varied aspects of the scout program for a period of four years.

This program of development affects 30,000 Boy Scout troops and 1,700 Cub Packs in all parts of the United States and its possessions. Mr. Strassner pointed out that the successful carrying forward of this program involves the time and energies of 209,007 volunteer leaders in the movement.

The award medallion is designed to be displayed on the flagstaff of the colors of the troops which earn it. It is a handsome golden and blue enamel metal shield shaped to fit on the flagstaff. The design includes a replica of the Boy Scout insignia, adopted by the date "1934". Beneath is the inscription "Ten Year Program Award—1933-1934".

To earn the emblem a scout troop must carry on an exceptional program throughout the year and maintain high standards in relation to attendance, membership, camping, hiking, civic service, health and others of the numerous activities of the scout program.

State Air Tour Is Completed Sunday

20-Ship Squadron Passes Over Hope at 3 Sunday Afternoon

LITTLE ROCK—The seventh annual Arkansas Air Tour ended at Municipal Airport Sunday and participants declared it the most successful ever held. Almost perfect flying weather prevailed during the two-day flight.

A large crowd gathered at the airport to watch the planes arrive. Hal Blending of Houston, flying a Waco plane owned by the Texaco Oil Company, was the first to land. He was closely followed by Basil York of Bauxite, flying a Command-Aire. The tour left Fort Smith about 9 Saturday morning and flew to Queen's new CWA airport, where many had gathered to greet the visitors. The field is expected to be one of the best in the state when it has been completely graded.

From De Queen the squadron of 21 planes flew to Texarkana and returned to Little Rock.

The 20-plane squadron passed over Hope at 3 p. m. Sunday.

ship (a Boning) operated by Pangborn and Turner, are stock airplanes designed for and being used on regular airtransport routes in the United States. The British first-place winner was specially built as a racing ship for the Australia race, and not for commercial use.

Aviation authorities here said that the race with its $50,000 prize originally was conceived as an encouragement to development of faster commercial air transport between England and Australia. The American second and third-place ships could be put into immediate operation with only minor modifications, carrying passengers and mail over the same route whereas the British "Comet" could not.

Playing an important part also in the British plane's victory was its use of three outstanding American aviation inventions: The controllable-pitch propeller, which makes possible a takeoff in a much smaller space and allows greater top-speed in the air; the "artificial horizon" which automatically shows the pilot whether his plane is on even keel and climbing or dropping, regardless of visibility outside; and the gyro compass, which marks the pilot's course more accurately and with greater stability than the magnetic compass.

Ultimatum Given by Siamese King

Demands by Parliament for Power May Result in His Resignation

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—King Prajadhipok, five-foot, wiry monarch of Siam, is willing to take back his throne to quit the throne if the home government knuckles down to what overnight proved to be an ultimatum demanding withdrawal of a measure curtailing his royal prerogatives.

The Bangkok government, Prajadhipok's private secretary revealed Sunday, has asked the ruler to reconsider his intention to abdicate, dropping his varied assortment of venerable royal titles.

Reports direct from Bangkok, the first since establishment of strict censorship, revealed, meanwhile, that the king's 10,000,000 subjects are completely in the dark about what is going on. There is no revolution, it was indicated, but those in power are keeping from the public the information that the king has threatened to abdicate, waiting until the thing is settled one way or the other.
